Description

As part of the Canada 150 celebrations, CIHR would like to showcase the life-changing research being conducted right here in Canada. They are collecting stories in a crowd-sourced digital storybook of health researchers [1] from across the country.

How you can get involved

Talk about your research in around 150 words. Why did you go into health research in the first place? What are you and your lab working on? What health problem(s) are you tackling? What new scientific knowledge are you creating? From discovery science and clinical research to strengthening the health care system and examining the social determinants of health – they want to hear about the exciting projects you're working on.
