Description

The Ontario Agri-Food Research Initiative offers funding for research that stimulates innovation to support the growth and competitiveness of Ontario's agri-food sector, promotes food safety and strengthens rural communities.

Research priorities change every year to address opportunities and challenges facing the agri-food sector and rural communities.

Priorities for the 2020-21 application year are:

- food safety
- plant health and protection
- sustainable production systems

Review the full details of the 2020-2021 research priorities [2] to make sure your proposal is within scope and addresses one or more of the specific research questions.

Intent to Submit Full Proposal: The 2020-21 Ontario Agri-Food Research Initiative call for proposals is a single stage application process (Full Proposal submission). An Intent to submit a Full Proposal step has been implemented to support peer review and review committee planning in advance of the submission deadline. This step requires that applicants complete a small number of fields in the 'General' and 'Peer Review' tabs in advance of the Full Proposal submission deadline. There is no 'submit' button or additional requirements for the Intent process; simply ensure those two tabs are completed by Thursday, December 10, 2020 at 2:00pm to signal your Intent to submit a Full Proposal to the program. Applicants can continue to work on their application form until their application is completed and submitted on or before the Full Proposal submission deadline. Participation in the Intent process is recommended but not mandatory.
