Description

Data management plans (DMP) is a document describing how your research data will be collected, stored, analyzed and shared throughout the research process. DMPs provide a clear plan to researchers on a team on how to responsibly handle data including where to store and locate their data, and how to share the data for future use.

This brown bag will cover:

- What is a DMP?
- Parts of a DMP
- DMP Assistant
- Questions from audience members.

Other sessions in the series:

- Navigating Academic Publishing: Contracts, Article Processing Charges, and Predatory Journals [2]
- Depositing Your Research Data in a Repository [3]
- Open Access, Open Data, and the Tri-Agencies [4]
