

U of G Library has new head of research and scholarship

Published on Research Alerts (<https://www-research.uoguelph.ca/research/alerts>)

U of G Library has new head of research and scholarship

Amy Buckland has joined the University of Guelph's McLaughlin Library as head of the Research and Scholarship team. Buckland is eager to begin working with the U of G community and contribute to McLaughlin Library's efforts to help raise greater awareness of open access. "I really want to work on building strong support for open access publishing and make sure that authors are retaining all of their rights," said Buckland. "Scholarship is a public good, the public should have access to it."

Previously, Buckland held positions at the University of Chicago and McGill University.

Alert ClassificationsCategory:

Research Management and Support

Disciplines:

Health and Life Sciences

Humanities

Information and Communications Technology

Physical Sciences and Engineering

Social Sciences

Source

URL:<https://www-research.uoguelph.ca/research/alerts/content/u-g-library-has-new-head-research-and-scholarship>